What about people who say they can fulfill the promise? Can they really do that?

Some seem to. But when you examine their track record, they're not so good as they might seem to be.

What do you mean?

2 things. One their prediction are usually ~~disproven~~^{so} general as to fit a number of so-called fulfillments. You will be in danger for example can be fulfilled in many ways. But if one could tell in ^{advance} you will be in such a work a city at such a time by by such a means, & if ^{you} did then I would tell that really predicting the future.

Can anyone do something like that?

JC did. He predicted when & how he would die several times during his lifetime & it all happened exactly as he said.

What is the other thing that ^{makes} you doubt

These future-tellers.

Will they come if their prediction under

Does the Bible approve of women preachers?

That depends.

Depends on what?

It depends on where & in what circumstances they preach. You see, to preach means to proclaim. & All x'm are told to proclaim the good news of sal. incl. women. For the Bible does approve of our commanding women to witness.

But should women be pastors of churches?

That's a different question. I believe the Bible places that responsibility on men. The elders & deacons of the NT church were men. When speaking of the public worship of the ch. the Bible says women are not to touch or usurp husband's from the head 1 Tim 2:12.

So women occupying pulpits & preaching is that way the Bible does not permit.

What sort of ministry can women have then?

The primary ministry of the married woman is to her family. A single woman may serve the Lord in other ways as missionaries, teachers, etc. as long as the leadership is directed by men. But I repeat, all - men & women - are to ^{proclaim} the good news of x's sal.
